Patients Rights

- To be treated with respect and consideration, addressed by name, listened to when there is a problem or question and to receive an appropriate response to a concern.
- Your privacy will be protected. The door will be closed during your examination. You are entitled to have visitors excused and to know why any observer is present. Those not directly involved in your care must have your permission to be present.
- The personnel involved in your care will treat all information they receive about you with the strictest confidence.
- You have the right to be free from all forms of abuse, neglect, or harassment and to be cared for in a safe setting.
- You will receive the care ordered by your doctor that is necessary for your medical problem without discrimination because of your race, national origin, creed, age, sex, sexual orientation, diagnosis or ability to pay for your care.
- You have the right to access information contained in your medical records within a reasonable time frame. After examining your medical records, you have then right to receive answers to your questions about the information within a reasonable time frame.
- You have the right to have an interpreter or use of alternative communication techniques or aids as needed.
- You should receive enough information from your doctor about your condition and treatment to make an informed decision about your care.
- You may refuse treatment. When doing so, you will be informed of the medical consequences of such actions.
- You have the right to accessible, responsive procedures that protect your ability to speak up about things that concern you. In addition, you can expect that your complaints will be addressed promptly and fairly.
- You will be advised if the medical center and/or medical staff propose to engage you in any research affecting your care or treatment. Risks, benefits and alternatives of the research will be discussed with you. You have the right to refuse to participate in such research.
- You have the right to know if the facility has relationships with outside organizations that may affect your treatment.
- You have the right to receive, upon request, an explanation of your bill for the treatment you receive.
- You have the right to be told of reasonable care choices when surgical treatment is no longer appropriate.
